

Prayer: Our Human Desire for God

With the disciple in Luke's Gospel (11:1),
we ask: "Lord, teach us to pray."

Despite our fallen and limited human nature,
we hunger for intimacy with the One who calls us into being~and much to our joy, God tirelessly calls each one of us "to that mysterious encounter known as prayer"

(Catechism of the Catholic Church,n.2567).

Continuing The Journey A Faith Formation Program For All Interested Adults

2008-2009

University of Dayton Formation Series

With the disciple in Luke's Gospel (11:1), we ask: "Lord, teach us to pray." Despite our fallen and limited human nature, we hunger for intimacy with the One who calls us into being—and much to our joy, God tirelessly calls each one of us "to that mysterious encounter known as prayer" (Catechism of the Catholic Church, n.2567).

As Catholic Christians, our practices of prayer directly affect how we live our faith. In a life of prayer, virtue is increased; suffering is linked to Christ's passion, Resurrection, and our eternal salvation; and we grow to celebrate the human experience.

The 2008-2009 University of Dayton Formation Series explores the critical role of prayer in our Catholic faith. The series offers readers a clearer understanding of what prayer is; an appreciation for the rich tradition of prayer in the Catholic faith; explanations about forms of prayer; practical insights for prayer in Catechesis; inspiration to pray through life and prayer of great Catholics; and a treatment of the very prayer that Jesus himself gave us: The Our Father. divine in our human experience.
